DOCTOR GRAHAM desires to inform the

Ladies and Gentlemen of Edinburgh, That at the earnest desire of many Medical Students, and other Gentlemen of this city, he proposes to favour them with a LECTURE on the simplest, most rational, and most effectual means of preserving uninterrupted bodily health, and the most delightful mental situation of serenity to the very longest possible period of our mortal existence: Teaching them how to build up the human body into a fair and firm temple of health, and to repose the soul on the all-blessed bosom of that pure, temperate, rational, and philosophical religion! which alone is accepted of God!!! and truly useful to all his creatures. The Lecture being therefore at once medical, moral, and religious; the technical terms, and nonsensical jargon, of the followers of the medical trade or force, being avoided; and the whole treated in a plain, practical, and useful manner, DR GRAHAM trusts it will prove perfectly satisfactory, and of the highest importance to the health and happiness, temporal and eternal, of every sober and intelligent person who honours him with their company, as the precepts and instructions proposed to be delivered in this long and pathetic Lecture cannot fail, if duly practised, to preserve them in health, strength, and happiness, through the course of a long, useful, and truly honourable life here, and to prepare them for the enjoyment of eternal felicity hereafter.

The LECTURE will be delivered on Monday evening next, the 8th inst. and on the Saturday evening following, precisely at Seven o'clock, at St Andrew's Chapel, foot of Carrubbers close, which will be illuminated with wax candles.

Admission only Two Shillings.

The following may be depended on as the facts relative to the appointment of the Commander in Chief for India:

Some time since the Minister sent word to the Directors of the East India Company, that although the India bill gave them the appointment of a Commander in Chief, he could wish to recommend an officer of indisputable merit, if they were not engaged. An answer was immediately returned to the following purport: "That they were convinced none but a proper person would be recommended, and that they were not engaged; therefore wished to know the name of the officer." — The Minister sent another message, and mentioned the name of General Slopier. Just at that time Colonel Campbell, late Governor of Jamaica, was recommended to the Directors, and they having a knowledge of his abilities, and being confident that he was well acquainted with India, immediately returned for answer, that they wished to have Colonel Campbell as Commander in Chief, but had no objection to Gen. Slopier being appointed Commander at Madras. Gen. Slopier being acquainted with the message, spoke highly in praise of Col. Campbell, but declared it impossible to serve under him agreeable to the etiquette of the army, he being a junior officer. Thus situated, the Minister was under the necessity of getting his Majesty to make Col. Campbell a General by brevet, whilst in India; which gave him local rank over Lieut. General Slopier, and he was accordingly appointed Commander in Chief at Bengal, and Lieut. General Slopier Commander in Chief at Madras, which is under the direction of the former.

We speak from good authority, that there does not subsist any dispute between the ministers of England and France relative to our possessions upon the coast of Africa, where a fort is to be built for the protection of our trade, and that the Board of Ordnance have complied with the wishes of the merchants trading to that part of the world, and a plan is now preparing by an engineer upon a much larger scale than the Master General first intended; but it having been represented to him how inadequate a small fort would be to the protection of the merchants property, he gave directions that the plan should be altered and enlarged.

Saturday a messenger was sent with dispatches to the Bishop of Osnabruck, at Hanover, to acquaint him with his being appointed Colonel of the second regiment of Foot Guards, in the room of the Earl of Waldegrave, deceased.

We learn from a gentleman lately arrived from the Continent, that it is universally credited through France, that the Dutch have agreed, in case the Emperor forces them into a war, and that they are assisted by the ministers of France, to admit them to garrison the Cape of Good Hope. If this should prove true, our Indian possessions will be at the mercy of France, in case we shall be engaged in any disturbance that takes place upon the Continent.

Extract of a letter from Dover, Oct. 30.

"A gentleman landed this morning from the packet, who is set off post for Bristol, where he is going on agency business of no small import. This stranger left Paris on Wednesday, at which time it was reported a war between the Emperor and the Dutch was inevitable. France negotiates for them; — Prussia assists them; — at present all the other powers of Europe are neutral."

Extract of a letter from Stockholm, Aug. 8.

"The powers of the north, and especially the Empress of Russia, have remarked, with some uneasiness, the movements of our Court for some time past, in putting the frontier places of the kingdom in a state of defence, and completing the troops. Though no complaints have been preferred, some questions have been made relative to the intention of the Ministry, principally by the Ambassador on the part of the Court of Petersburg. The Baron de Creutz, Minister of State, formed a memorial by way of reply, calculated for appeasing those inquietudes, and which indeed hath produced that effect. This answer having been improperly related in divers public papers, we give it here as literally translated from the German:

"There is nothing more noble, and more conformable to the sublime character of her Imperial Majesty, than the cordial and amicable manner in which that Sovereign has charged you, Sir, to confer with me on the reports made to her Majesty of the preparations of war carrying on in Sweden and on its frontiers. I am too fully convinced of the sentiments which animate the King my master towards your august Sovereign, not to be persuaded that his Majesty will find in this manner of acting new proofs of friendship and affection for her Imperial Majesty. A suspicion formed is dissipated by sincere explanations, which efface erroneous ideas arising from false and exaggerated information. Though I cannot, Sir, give you in form a ministerial answer, before this affair has been laid before the King, (then at Paris) I am sufficiently informed of the views and dispositions which by his orders are carrying into execution with respect to the fleet and the army, to have the honour to assure you, that neither in the Swedish ports, nor on the frontiers, the least preparations for war have been or are making; that in Scandinavia the troops are not assembled; that at Carlscrona no other magazines are established than those which by some new regulations are designed for the service."

"I must, in the mean time, assure you with the same freedom which the open and amicable behaviour of your Sovereign deserves, that his Majesty also acts according to the principles of an enlightened and vigilant government. The King gives these movements to his military and defensive system to preserve it constantly on a proper footing. His fleet was in a disadvantageous condition; he has ordered it to be repaired. His artillery was in the capital; there it is now useless, since the King is convinced of the friendship of the Empress; he therefore ordered it to be distributed among the frontier places, to the defence of which it belongs, and where it naturally ought to remain. This, Sir, is all that has been done, and that openly in the face of the public. The considerable land forces, which, according to the public reports, were drawn together in Scandinavia, amount to 20,000 men, who are working on the fortifications of Christiansditt and Landscron. These dispositions do not announce the least hostile design, but on the contrary pacific measures, tending to the preservation of that repose by which the government of the King is become so dear to his people. In fine, I have the honour to assure you, that his Majesty, penetrated with the repeated and incessant marks of the friendship of her Imperial Majesty towards him, desires nothing more ardently than to give her manifest proofs of his reciprocal amity, and that the King considers the good correspondence which exists between him and your Sovereign, as the most glorious and happy epoch of his reign."

EDINBURGH.

The Chamber of Commerce and Manufactures established by Royal Charter in the city of Glasgow, in April last, voted a pair of Pistols richly ornamented, of the best workmanship that could be produced in Scotland, and finished in the style of the ancient Scottish armour, to be presented to his Excellency the Marquis de Bouille, late commander in chief of the armies of his Most Christian Majesty in the West Indies; in testimony of the very high respect that Society entertain for the character of that distinguished Nobleman, manifested in an eminent degree during his late command; where, by an unexampled magnanimity in the career of victory, he softened the horrors of war in a manner hitherto unknown, and guarded and protected the property of individuals in those moments of dire distress, when the vanquished were accustomed to experience devaluation and ruin.

Translation of the Answer from his Excellency the Marquis de Bouille, to the President and Members of the Chamber of Commerce and Manufactures at Glasgow, dated at London the 6th May 1784.

"GENTLEMEN,
"The esteem which you have put on my conduct during the course of last war, is infinitely flattering to me; and I accept, with much satisfaction, the mark which you are pleased to give me of it. — My greatest desire, next to that of softening the calamities inseparable from war, has always been to merit and obtain the estimation of a nation so generous and respectable as that of Great Britain. The testimonies of it shown to me by the Gentlemen of the Chamber of Commerce of the city of Glasgow, fill me with the most lively sentiments of gratitude, of which I request you to accept my assurances, as well as of the very high consideration and respect with which I have the honour to be,

"GENTLEMEN,
"Your most obedient and most humble servant;
(Signed) LE MARQUIS DE BOUILLE."

These pistols have been lately finished, and are committed to the care of General Melville, who has obligingly undertaken to convey them to the Marquis de Bouille at Paris. — They are the workmanship of Mr. Thomas Murdoch on Leith Walk, an eminent maker of pistols in the ancient Highland fashion, who was bred at Down in Perthshire. They are of highly polished steel, richly ornamented with arms, trophies, &c. in gold and silver; and upon the whole, thought to be the finest pistols of their kind ever executed in North Britain.

Extract of a letter from London, Nov. 2.
Several letters in town mention, that hostilities are already commenced between the Emperor and the Dutch, and that the latter has taken several vessels from the former; but the truth of this is much doubted, although there is the greatest probability of such an event.

This morning, about one o'clock, an express arrived at the Marquis of Carmarthen's office, with dispatches from Lord Viscount Torrington, his Majesty's Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of Brussels, containing the important intelligence that letters of recall had been sent to the Imperial minister at the Hague. All the troops in Austrian Flanders were in motion; and every warlike preparation was making with the utmost expedition.

"The Elector of Cologne," it is said, has offered to assist the Emperor with 7,000 men.

"A great number of English emigrants have precipitately left Ostend within these few days, on the prospect of hostilities commencing near that quarter."

"The Dutch have dispatched two vessels, with orders to cruise and send all vessels belonging to the United Provinces they could meet with into port, and in consequence upwards of 50 sail, chiefly fishermen, are arrived in the Provinces. War is every day expected to be declared between the Dutch and the Emperor."

"When the last mails left Holland, the Dutch had received no answer from the Emperor to the attack on his flag. They are very busy in warlike preparations. They have a fleet equal to any they kept in the late war. They have resolved to raise six millions of guilders for the expense of the war, and have sent agents to many of the Princes of Germany to treat for troops. In the mean while, the Court of France hath declared a surprise that the Dutch should so suddenly bring matters to extremities with the Emperor, as to prohibit France from adjusting the matter by mediation, as they wished to do; and the French court further explains to them, that a treaty which was concluded between his Most Christian Majesty and the Emperor in 1756, it is stipulated, that France shall assist the empire with 25,000 men, in any case of the Austrian Netherlands being attacked. — The Dutch, therefore, begin to find out, that they are deluded by the amiable professions of the French Court; led by an ignominious into a morass, and now left to get out as they can. They now turn their eyes to the King of Prussia; but it is not supposed that he will help them, without demanding some great sacrifice of treaty; as well as the discharge of the men who are now at the helm of affairs, and who form the party against the Prince of Orange. It seems almost to be only resource of the Dutch, from the numberless difficulties which they are now involved, to make peace with the Emperor, by giving up the point of a free navigation of the Scheldt."

Yesterday, being the anniversary of the discovery of the Potato Plot, the great guns were fired from the Castle, and the same was observed as a holiday at the Banks and public offices.

Wednesday evening, Peter McGregor, convicted before the High Court of Justiciary of being concerned in the riots committed at Canonmills in the beginning of June last, found means to make his escape from prison, by being dressed in a woman's apparel. McGregor was sentenced to three months imprisonment, to be banished for fourteen years, and the first five years of his service to be adjudged.

Wednesday, James Braid, about 24 years of age, William Braid, near 20 years, (brothers) and Jean Lindsay, condemned at last Circuit for house-breaking and theft, were hanged in the Castle-yard, Glasgow. They appeared to be penitent, and their behaviour was decent. W. Braid addressed the populace in a speech of some length, in pathetic language, to avoid such courtes as had brought him and his fellow-sufferers to an untimely end, after which he prayed. The brothers shook hands, before they were turned off. They were attended by five ministers. The oldest person living does not remember a woman executed there for stealing before. The gibbet and scaffold on which the malefactors stood was constructed of the plan of the London scaffold, with springs, and it fell down with ease, so that the unhappy criminals were launched into eternity without any apparent struggle. The uncommon sight of three fellow-creatures suffering at once, drew together an immense crowd of spectators, and we are happy to say no accident befel any of them.

Early on Sunday morning, a bookfeller's shop was broken into in the Saltmarket, Glasgow. The thieves appeared to have missed their booty, as they took only a few Morisco letter-cases, but had searched every drawer, and examined the papers in them. An attempt had been made to break into the neighbouring shop the week before.

The following proclamation is copied from a Virginia newspaper:

By his Excellency BENJAMIN HARRISON, Esq. Governor of the Commonwealth of Virginia:

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS I have received information that there are different parts of this commonwealth, combinations formed by a number of persons, who, impelled by a turbulent spirit, have manifested a disposition to treat with outrage some of those who have returned to this state under the sanction of the Definitive Treaty of Peace, and the acts of Assembly passed in October last: And whereas such a disposition, unless early suppressed by the interposition of Government, might grow into a dangerous evil, disturb the quiet of the commonwealth, and involve a violation of the public faith and honour, so solemnly pledged for preserving sacred the articles of the treaty, signed and ratified; to prevent, therefore, effectually the dangerous consequences to be apprehended from the licentiousness of such persons, I have thought fit, by and with the advice of the Council of State, to issue this my proclamation, strictly enjoining all Magistrates and other civil officers, to use their utmost vigilance in the preservation of the peace, and particularly to extend the earliest protection to all those who come within the description of the said acts of Assembly, and have reason to apprehend danger from such riotous persons, and to secure to them the enjoyment of those rights which they derive both from the treaty and acts of Assembly aforesaid: And that no person or description of persons may presume hereafter, in the hope of escaping with impunity, to do any act which shall contravene the one or oppose the other; I do further declare that Government being resolved inviolably to support the public honour, and to enforce a pointed execution of the law, will not fail to take the most effectual measures for bringing to condign punishment all those who, senseless to the obligation of a solemn treaty, and unmindful of the dignity and honour of their country pledged for its support, shall be hardy enough to offend herein.

Given under my hand, and the seal of the commonwealth, in the Council Chamber at Richmond, this 26th day of July, in the year of our Lord 1784, and of the Commonwealth the ninth.

Teste

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

A. BLAIR, C. C.

At the Assembly of Delegates, for promoting a Parliamentary reform, held in Dublin on the 25th, 26th, and 27th days of October 1784.

WILLIAM SHARMAN, Esq. President, in the Chair. Resolved unanimously, That the people, in the largest sense of that word, have an undoubted right to state their grievances, to petition for a redress of them, and to propose remedies for the same, with that deference which is due to the Legislature, and with that firmness which belongs to the people.

Resolved unanimously, That this right belongs to the people, with peculiar extent and energy, on the subject of Parliamentary reform; seeing that such defect, as that now complained of in the Legislature, is incapable of remedy but through the exertion of the people, and, if not remedied, would destroy their share in the Legislature, and of course the balance and freedom of the constitution.

Resolved unanimously, That, to combat this evil, the people have a right to confer with each other, the better to digest such mode of redress as they may wish to recommend to Parliament; and that that method of conferring, which most conduces to just investigation, and is least subject to disorder, is best.

Resolved unanimously, That the meeting in one place, of persons selected by the people for that purpose, in preference to the meeting in multitudes, at various and distant places, is obviously most conducive to concord and sound decision.

Resolved unanimously, That a reform in the representation of the people in Parliament, is indispensably necessary.

Resolved unanimously, That we esteem it fortunate, that in this great pursuit there is no competition of interest between the sister nations of Great Britain and Ireland; but that, on the contrary, a reform of Parliament is equally desired in each kingdom, by the wisest and honestest men in both.

Resolved unanimously, That the appointment of this assembly by the people, and the steps they have taken from time to time on this subject, have been constitutional, and calculated to procure the aid and co-operation of the Legislature in that salutary work.

Resolved unanimously, That this assembly do hereby address the counties, counties of cities, and great towns, who have as yet been represented therein, recommending it to each of the respective electors for that purpose before the 11th of January next, and to exhort them, as they respect their own constituency—as they wish for the success of a Parliamentary reform—and as they tender the perpetual liberty and prosperity of their country—to seize this opportunity of effecting that great and necessary confirmation of the constitution.

Resolved unanimously, That this assembly adjourn to the 20th of January next, then to meet in Dublin.

W. SHARMAN, President.
H. T. ASHENHURST, Sec.

Extract of a letter from Dublin, 29. 29.

By a letter from Tipperary, dated the 18th instant, we are informed, that, "Yesterday there was a great attack made by the army on Ballinacorney (Mr. English's land) forty-four soldiers, headed by a most gallant officer, attempted the garrison, and were repulsed with the loss of three killed and eighteen wounded; some of them, it is thought, will never recover. You would pity the shocking appearance of the wounded coming in here on carts. The situation and strength of the garrison was such, that a regiment of men, without bombs, (for cannon could have no effect) would not dislodge the besieged."

We are informed by a correspondent, that the Fife-Hunt, held at their autumn meeting in Cupar on Monday the 25th October, the fine weather during the week, with the goodness of the hounds, afforded capital sport.—The company were numerous and brilliant, who attended the balls, &c.

Behold this List, which simply shews
The number of the Belles and Beaux,
That graced the Cupar Ball;
But ill can tell, how they exceed
The Beauties on the Banks of Tweed,
And every Heart enthral.

FIRST PRINCIPLES OF PHILOSOPHY;

A NEW
Their Application to the different Subjects of TASTE, SCIENCE, AND HISTORY.
By JOHN BRUCE, A. M.
Professor of Philosophy in the University, and Fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh.
The Third Edition enlarged.

By Authority of the Court of Session,
To be Sold by public roup, within the Parliament or New Session House of Edinburgh, on Wednesday the 11th day of December next, between the hours of four and five afternoon,

The LANDS of WESTER RYND, lying in the parish of Rynd and county of Perth, the proven rent whereof, after all deductions, is 165 l. 6 s. and the upset price is appointed to be 412 l. 10 s. Sterling, being 25 years purchase of said rent. They consist of about 200 acres Scots measure, and give a freehold qualification.

This estate is situate upon the River Earn, about one mile above its junction with the Tay, and as much below the bridge of Earn, and is distant about three computed miles from the town of Perth, to which there is easy communication by good roads, or by the river, which is navigable by vessels of considerable burden for some miles above these lands.

The greatest part of the estate is surrounded by the River Earn, which forms a peninsula, containing about 100 acres, upon the neck whereof is situated a neat and commodious Mansion-house adjoining, whereon are office-houses, dove-cot, garden, and two large orchards, well stored with fruit trees of various kinds, and of the best qualities.—The house and orchards are well sheltered with baysen planting, which, with the timber upon the banks of the river, consisting chiefly of oaks, ash, and remarkably fine Laburnums, are very valuable.

Within the bounds of the estate are four Salmon-fishings, presently very low rented. The grounds are also low fit, paying at present only about 16 shillings per acre; whereas the Lands in the neighbourhood, though of no better quality, give from 35 to 40 shillings per acre. The purchaser may have immediate access to the mansion house, &c. and about 30 acres of the land; and a considerable part of the price may remain in his hands.

For further particulars, enquire of John Yeung, Junior, writer in Edinburgh.

Schoolmaster's salary, 6 8 6-12rths

26 6 0 7-raths

Free yearly rent, L. 103 10 8 1-rath

And the proven value, at 23 years purchase, is L. 2381 3 s. 1-rath

These lands are pleasantly situated upon the river of Doon, within eight miles of the town of Ayr, six of Maybole, and two of Dalmlington. They contain betwixt 800 and 900 acres Scots measure, great part of which is arable and excellent meadow land, mostly all inclosed and subdivided. They admit of great improvement, and abound with materials, as they contain inexhaustible mines of coal, and quarries of limestone, which can be wrought at an easy rate. There is a good mansion-house upon the lands, and some timber and planting.

The lands are held blench of the Crown, and entitle the proprietor to vote for a member of Parliament for the county.

LOT II.—The Lands of CHANG and CAIRN, lying in the parish of Barr, and shire of Ayr; the proven gross yearly rent whereof is L. 98 3 s. 2 6-raths.

There is the greatest reason to believe that these lands contain very valuable mines of lead, trial having been made, and some are turned out.

These lands are also held blench of the Crown, and entitle the proprietor to vote for a member of Parliament for the county.

The teinds of the whole above-mentioned lands of Keirs, Chang, and Cairn, are valued, and are possessed under tack from the Deans of the Chapel Royal, for nineteen years after Martinmas 1780, for payment of 1 s. 8 d. Sterling of tack duty.
